The complex is still traditional in the Cesar Manrique style, with white walls and dark brown wooden elements which offer a wonderful contrast to the large blue beach entrance pool, the green lawns and the blue sky.

The peaceful, relaxed atmosphere of the residential complex is enhanced by the quiet, loosely built environment. Charco del Palo is a nudist resort, and while being nude is optional, the small village allows you to go textile-free your entire vacation.

There are natural rock pools in Charco del Palo, and the two largest are surrounded by sandy areas. They are tidal pools that fill with fresh water with every high tide. Directly in front of the residential complex there is a small bay 170 m away, which is ideal for swimming in the open sea. There are two ladders so that you can get in and out comfortably. It is also a very popular dive site on the island! So if you are fascinated by the underwater world and want to snorkel, this small bay is ideal for comfortably exploring the crystal clear waters of the Atlantic Ocean. Even at shallow depths you can see a wide variety of marine life such as octopus and many variations of reef fish and, if you are lucky, see one or the other larger fish or rays. If you prefer to be on land, Charco del Palo is the ideal starting point for a wonderful walk along the fascinating rugged coast.

As already mentioned, there are quite a few natural pools, sand dunes and many wonderful hidden places to explore. Beyond mass tourism, you can hike here in peace and don't be surprised if you don't meet anyone else on your hike.

Charco del Palo is a relaxed, quiet nudist urbanization away from mass tourism!
